“I know, let’s go see a movie . . .

From small audio and video distribution solutions to large whole home control solutions and complete home theaters

AMX offers audio and video solutions to fit every need

Simply walk into the room press the MOVIE button and it all comes together. Your movie starts, the drapes close, the lights dim and the room comes alive. With AMX, you can even watch that same movie or any other video content in any room throughout your home.

Enjoy the quality of pure HDTV throughout your home without sacrificing video quality. Video technology is becoming more complicated every day. The signal type or format being sent out, whether the signal includes power, the size and strength of the pipeline distributing the video – all these factors are carefully considered and delivered to you in the form of the highest quality video on the market. With an AMX Video Distribution System, you consolidate all this equipment in one central location with your various source devices (such as satellite receivers and DVD players) so you don’t have to worry about having duplicate DVD players or satellite receivers cluttering every room in your home. All you need in each room is your display and a control interface.

AMX offers a complete line of stylish interface products including remote controls, touch panel and keypads - each offering different options to personalize each space. And, what you don’t see – our outstanding professional video distribution system – is working behind the scenes to ensure the investment you have made in your source devices is maintained everywhere throughout your home.

Advantages of Distributed Video

- Distribute pure HDTV throughout your whole home without sacrificing quality
- Eliminate equipment “clutter” at every display by consolidating source devices in a single equipment rack or room
- Utilize the same sources in any room – at any time
- Access video from any control interface – anywhere in your home

AMX Planning for the Automated Home of the Future – Today

Welcome to luxury, convenience and simplicity in your automated home. Here your unified system integrates and controls all your audio/video, environmental and communication technologies to suit your lifestyle. AMX understands complex technology and makes it simple and convenient to use. In short, life just got a whole lot easier.

From distributed video systems to automated lighting and sublime multimedia rooms, it takes careful planning to design and install technology that complements your home and lifestyle. An automated home isn't science fiction any more. In fact, it's even easier than you might think. With an authorized AMX Integrator, you'll receive expert design assistance from the start. Your fully customized, ingeniously automated system will simplify the use of multimedia, communication, lighting, security, climate control and more.

Planning for the future should include thinking about how your home technology needs might extend beyond a distributed video system. By considering these expansion plans now, your AMX Integrator can work closely with your architect, builder or interior designer in the initial planning stages to implement a "future-proof" solution that eliminates growing pains. Automating your home represents a significant investment in your home and in technology. To protect your investment's long-term value, you'll want to be sure that your home and system will easily accommodate new innovations in multimedia, networking and communications formats, as well as your family's changing needs. With AMX and our authorized AMX Integrators, future equipment and programming upgrades, as well as capabilities add-ons, are part of the initial system design and ongoing technical support strategy.
